

ABOUT YOUR INSTRUCTOR

FRANK R. HARRISON III, PH.D.

Dr. Harrison was born in Jacksonville, Florida, and remained there for the majority of his first eighteen years before going to college. He received his B.A. from The University of the South (Sewanee) with Optimen Merens and Honors, and both his M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Virginia. He is now Josiah Meigs Professor of Philosophy in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Georgia. This has been his "professional base" since 1962. He also has taught at Roanoke College, Emory University, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Georgia Institute of Technology, and the University of Keele in England, as well as lecturing in many parts of the United States, Mexico, Korea, and Europe.

His professional interests are broad, ranging from philosophy of religion to symbolic logic. He has written several books and monographs on symbolic logic and critical thinking, published numerous articles in foreign and domestic journals, and presented research papers at various meetings. He enjoys both research and teaching.

As hobbies, Dr. Harrison likes to travel, garden, and do restoration construction work. He enjoys classical music, once having played both piano and organ. He is now attempting to play the guitar but without much success.
